

ALFRED FRIENDLY PRESS FELLOWSHIPS INCLUDING THE DANIEL PEARL FELLOWSHIPS

PROGRAM GOALS:

- ◆ To provide the Fellow with experience in reporting, writing and editing that will enhance future professional performance;
- ◆ To enable the Fellow to gain a practical understanding of the function and significance of the free press in American society;
- ◆ To transfer knowledge gained on the program to colleagues at home;
- ◆ To foster continuing ties between free press institutions and journalists in the U.S. and their counterparts in other countries.

CRITERIA OF ELIGIBILITY:

- ◆ Current full-time employment as a journalist for the news or editorial departments of independent newspapers, wire services, online publications, or magazines of general public interest in a developing country;
- ◆ At least three years of professional experience as a journalist in the print/online media;
- ◆ Citizenship of a developing country;
- ◆ Early to mid-career status and between 25 and 35 years old;
- ◆ A demonstrated personal commitment to a career in journalism in a developing country;
- ◆ Ability and desire to share what is learned on the fellowship with other journalists at home;
- ◆ Endorsement from the management of the home publication;
- ◆ An excellent command of both written and spoken English as all activities are conducted in English.

Due to requirements of reporting in the U.S., preference is given to applicants who are proficient in using computers and driving automobiles.

THE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

In the conviction that a strong, free press is essential to the healthy functioning of a democracy, the late Alfred Friendly, a Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter and former managing editor of The Washington Post, conceived a fellowship program that would both impart American journalistic traditions and respond to worldwide interest in the dissemination of fair and accurate news. It was Alfred Friendly's belief that working side by side with reporters and editors is the best way to absorb the practical realities of journalism in this country and the instrumental role it plays in our society. Therefore, he created the program that bears his name to immerse approximately ten journalists each year for six months in American newsrooms. Between 1984 and 2005, the ALFRED FRIENDLY PRESS FELLOWSHIPS (AFPF) has trained 232 journalists from 74 countries.

In addition to the six month newsroom experience, the program provides an allowance for journalism books, conferences, short-term professional visits and a mentor exchange; offers a Training the Trainer class to prepare our Fellows to share what they've learned on the program; works more closely with home and host news organizations to create specific plans for the Fellows; offers specialized fellowships by topic (business, investigations, health, etc.) and region (Muslim world); and teaches newsroom management skills. Our goal is to increase the level of usefulness and excellence of the AFPF program in the 21st century and to broaden the impact of the program on countries that are working to understand press freedom.

Sharing the goals of AFPF, the Daniel Pearl Foundation partnered with AFPF in 2003 to offer special fellowships to honor the life and work of journalist Daniel Pearl – the Wall Street Journal South Asia bureau chief who was kidnapped and murdered in Pakistan in 2002. Daniel Pearl Fellows – two from Pakistan and one from Yemen – have worked at the Los Angeles Times and Washington DC bureau of The Wall Street Journal. Applicants for the DANIEL PEARL FELLOWSHIPS (DPF) must come from areas where Daniel Pearl worked as a journalist – South Asia, the Middle East, and North Africa. While Daniel Pearl Fellows are Friendly Fellows and participate in all fellowship activities, they may receive opportunities not offered to other Friendly Fellows that support the goals of the Daniel Pearl Foundation – to encourage dialogue among people of different cultures, reduce cultural and religious hatred and create a platform for responsible and creative journalism.

The fellowship program begins in March with a two-week orientation seminar in Washington designed to prepare the Fellows – both personally and professionally – for the challenges of living and working in the United States. At the middle of the program, Fellows and staff come together for a week at The Poynter Institute in St. Petersburg, Florida for seminars focused on writing, editing and newsroom coaching. A final seminar in Washington reunites the Fellows and prepares them to train other journalists upon returning to their home countries. It also allows Fellows to compare and evaluate their experiences and discuss their impressions of the American media. Fellows return to their home countries in early September to begin sharing their knowledge and skills with colleagues, editors and publishers in their home newsrooms.

The Fellowship covers all costs of program-related international and domestic U.S. travel, health insurance and provides a monthly stipend to cover basic living expenses. It is highly recommended that Fellows bring additional money with them. The stipend is not sufficient to provide support for spouses or other dependents. We recommend family remain at home for the duration of the fellowships.

AFPF APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS AND CHECKLIST

A complete Alfred Friendly Press Fellowship application includes ALL items A through J. Please check the boxes next to the items as you complete them. Applications are only accepted by mail. Incomplete, emailed or faxed applications will not be reviewed. AFPF must receive completed applications at their office by September 1. To ensure on-time delivery, some applicants use courier services such as DHL. All mailing costs are the responsibility of the applicant. We evaluate candidates based on accomplishment and potential. We are particularly interested in applicants who show a significant capacity for growth and leadership and can demonstrate that a six-month fellowship would make them better journalists.

- A APPLICATION FORM. This form (pages 3 and 4) must be completed in full and signed. Please attach one additional page to the application form if more space is needed to answer questions.
- B CV/RÉSUMÉ. Attach a curriculum vitae (CV) or résumé that outlines your professional and educational history. Briefly describe your responsibilities and achievements in each job. The CV/résumé should be one to two pages, typed and in English.
- C ESSAYS. Each of the essays should be one to two pages, typed and in English.
 1. Professional Statement. Please describe your journalistic experience, career plans and goals, and how you will work in and outside your home newsroom to share what you learn on the AFPF program with others.
 2. Individual Fellowship Goals. Outline the specific goals you'd like to achieve if awarded an Alfred Friendly Fellowship/Daniel Pearl Fellowship. These goals should correspond to those that you list on page 4 (Section IV) of the application and should not replicate the program goals of AFPF.
- D LETTERS OF REFERENCE. Two confidential reference letters are required. A third reference from someone familiar with your personality, character, background, etc., is optional. References from AFPF alumni are welcomed and encouraged. References must be written on the forms provided (pages 5 and 6) and sent directly to AFPF (via post, e-mail or fax) or included in your application packet in sealed envelopes. English translations must accompany letters not written in English originally. Effective letters of reference are those offering significant insights into the candidate's ability and experiences that best indicate his/her suitability to be a Friendly Fellow.
 1. Required Reference #1 must be written by the publisher, editor, manager or director of your publication.
 2. Required Reference #2 must be written by your immediate supervisor — or another person for whom you have worked — who can attest to your journalistic abilities and professional character.
- E EMPLOYER'S ENDORSEMENT. Please have your employer complete and sign the form on page 7 endorsing your participation and granting a six-month leave of absence should you be chosen.
- F ARTICLES. Four clippings of published articles that best show your interests and abilities. Articles must be legible, easily photocopied and published between September 1, 2004 and September 1, 2005. Please clearly date the articles and include URLs if your articles are available online. Do NOT send question/answer interviews. Full English translations, completed by the applicant, must accompany articles not written in English originally. Note: Editors who do not have recent clips may include copies of published work along with a description of your editing role in these samples. Internet journalists must submit samples that are journalistic in nature and demonstrate that your job involves news gathering, writing, editing or producing.
- G PHOTOGRAPH. Attach one passport-size head-shot photo, taken in the last six months, to page 3 of the application.
- H PUBLICATION. One issue of the newspaper or magazine for which you write.
- I PRESS CREDENTIALS. A clear photocopy of your working press credentials, press pass or equivalent.
- J COPY OF PASSPORT. A clear photocopy of your valid passport(s). (Please include picture, information pages and any U.S. visas you've had).

 ENGLISH LANGUAGE ASSESSMENT. Top candidates will be required to demonstrate their English language proficiency prior to receiving a fellowship. Evaluations will be administered in the candidate's country of residence.
